Painter of Dead Girls is a compilation split into two parts, with the first half showcasing songs initially tracked as an equipment burn-in test leading up to the band’s seminal Prowler In The Yard full-length. The secondary half of the material includes songs from their cult splits with Gnob and Benümb, covers of Helmet and The Stooges, the long-lost track "Delusional Supremacy 2K", and a raw basement live recording of “Rejection Fetish”. The cover art was done by Chris Taylor of Pg. 99 who would later create the art for the band’s iconic Terrifyer album, which also turns 20 later this year.
