Further exploring the haunting folk and acoustic sides of Singapore's Tok Yathraa, Chapter: Hantu Jepun refers to wandering spirits of dead Japan military personnel, who were once stationed in Singapore and other Southeast Asian region during World War 2. At times, sightings of the Hantu Jepun are described as scenes of Japanese soldiers lining up in formation or marching to attention. This explains the sounds of marching boots in most, if not all of the Hantu Jepun stories shared by the Singapore community as well as those who encounter the spirits all across Southeast Asia. Notice: this is the most melodic and beautiful Tok Yathraa album, for black / heavy metal check out the other chapters. All awesome and worth your time: In today's dull culture there is no alternative to Tok Yathraa, he's one of a kind.
